Chapter 1 by Cat4055

Let me guess, you went ahead and read this story, you just had to click on it because your instincts told you to. If I had a dollar for every time someone did something because they were told NOT to I would be writing this from a mansion and making more money by getting people to read this story. OK enough of that, now on to the um real story. This will be the worst story you have ever read so don't read it. OK now I'll actually go on to the story. It's also totally not a horror story. Think before you scroll down and read it. Actually I'm not going to write it. I'm just going to bore you by making a list of things that count as things horror stories do wrong. Well, at least most horror stories.

1. Say the main character is running in the woods/town/anywhere and he/she trips about one million times, does this actually happen to you? No, it doesn't.
2. So, you're being chased by an ax/chainsaw/ anything dangerous wielding maniac. First thing wrong about this. Should he/she be tripping more then you? Yes, he/she is probably wearing a mask or a full body suit and therefore tripping more. Second, do you know how heavy good dangerous weapons are? They are extremely heavy and you can't run at full speed while holding them.

I don't care if it's a ghost or not. If it is physical enough to kill you it is physical enough to make noise.

OK, I'm done ranting, you can stop reading this now, Why are you still reading this?! Stop wasting your life and go out there and make a good horror stories without making me rant about it. Do it for me, a random strange online who you have probably never me, I believe that you can do it.
